The Science of Character-Reading by Handwriting.

Many persons laugh at what is called graptomancy, or the art of judging characters by handwriting, and yet all acknowledge that handwriting does indicate something. Every one allows a difference between a man and a woman's hand. We hear people speak of "vulgar hand," "a gentlemanly hand," "a clerky hand," and so forth. "I had once," said Archbishop Whately, "a remarkable proof that handwrighting is ometimes, at least, an index to character. I had a pupil at Oxford whom 1 liked in most respects greatly. There was but one thing about him that seriously dissatisfied me, and that, as I often told him, was his handwriting. It was not bad as writing, but it had a mean, shuffling character in it, which always inspired me with a feeling of suspi-

"While he remained at Oxford I saw rothing to justify this suspicion. But a transaction in which he was afterward engaged, and in which I saw more of his character than I had done before, convinced me that the writing had spoken truly. But I knew of a much moore curious case, in which a celebrated graptomancer was able to judge of character more correctly by handwriting than he had been able to do by personal observation. He was on a visit at a friend's house, where, among other guests. he met a lady whose conversation and manners greatly struck him, and for whom he conceived a strong friendship, based on the esteem he felt for her as a singularly truthful, pure-minded and single-hearted woman. The lady of the house, who knew her real character to be the very reverse of what she seemed, was curious to know whether Mr. Blank would be able to discover this by her handwriting. "Accordingly she procured a slip of this lady's writing (having ascertained that he had never seen it), and gave it to him one evening as the handwriting of a friend of hers whose character she wished him to decipher. His usual habit, when he undertook to exercise this power, was to take a slip of e letter, cut down lengthwise so as not to show any sentence, to his room at night and to bring it down with his judgment in writing the next moring. On this occasion when the party were seated at the break-fast-table, the lady whose writing he had unsconciously been examining made some observation which particularly struck Mr. Blank as seeming to betoken a very noble and truthful character.

"He expressed his admiration of her sentiments very warmly, adding, at the same time, to the lady of the house, 'Not so, by the way, your friend, and he put into her hand the slip of writing of her guest which she had given him the evening before, over which he had writen the words; 'Facina-ting, false, and hollow-hearted.' The lady of the house kept the secret, and Mr. Blank never knew that the writing on which he had pronounced so severe a judgement was that of the friend he so greatly admired,'

A Boy Lover's Passion.

A singular and romantic case of immature passion was disclosed recently at St. Paul, Minn., in a tragedy. For several months Albert Drake, a well-connected youth of 16 years, has been in the agonies of a first love with Miss Jennie Faulkner, 15 years old, daughter of a well-to-do and highly respected family. The affair having assumed a mord dangerous form than a schoolmate attacl ment the mother of the girl fc. bade the youth the house and further association with her child. She had no further objection than their youth. Young Drake asked the girl to elope with him, but she declared her intention to obey her mother. Having broken the news to her lover in person gently but firmly, young Drake accused her of having deserted him for a rival, and they separated in mutual distrust. The girl was returning from school when she met the lad and spoke pleasantly to him. He was white with passion and made no answer, but drew a pistol and fired it point blank at her face. Although they were only a few feet apart, his aim failed him. She turned on her heel and ran down the street. The boy ran after her, firing as they ran, until a gentleman caught the girl up in his arms and ran into a house with her. Drake came quickly upon the scene and demanded admittance, but was refused. In the meantime a party was in pursuit of him and he ran from them. In his flight he fired a shot at himself without effect. As the pursuers were gaining, he suddenly stopped, placed the pistol in both hands, and, laying the muzzle against his forehead, fired, and fell dead upon the street.

A Dog's Memory.-Day before yesterday some wretch tied a tin kettle to the tail of John Fallon's dog. The dog started off with the kettle about three o'clock in the afternoon, and after running up to ParkCity and down to Farmington, came back in the evening without the kettle andvery much fatigued. The guests at the Clift House extended their consolation to the dog, who was manifestly in need of sympathy. Everything went well with the dog until about 9 o'clock, when a young lady from Juab was requested to play "The Irish Patrol" on the piano. She played the faint, weird music of the opening bars, when the dog began to prick up his ears. The girl strolled by degrees into the heavier staccato passages which indicate the near approach of the advance guard, and with a yelp of terror he rose up and went through the window, taking sash, panes and all, under the plausible impression that the tin kettle was again advancing upon him from the rear. The dog ran to the Jordan and suicided by drowning.—Salt Lake Tribune.

Gents: —Upon the recommendation of a friend I tried Brows's loop BITTERS as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was thoroughly convinced was wasting away with Consumption. Having lost three daughters by the terrible disease, under the care of cminent physicians, I was loth to believe that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but, to my great surprise, before my daughter had taken one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, she began to mend and now is quite restored to former health. A fifth daughter began to show signs of Consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "Tonics were required;" and when informed that the elder sister was taking Brown's Iron Bitters, responded "that is a good tonic, take it."
